ISLAMIYAT — COMPLETE CHAPTER SUMMARY

Introduction to Religion and Islam

Detailed exam-friendly summary containing the major definitions, concepts, classifications, Qur'anic references, and key points from the chapter.

PART 1 — INTRODUCTION TO RELIGION

1. Why Do We Need Religion?

Religion addresses some of the deepest questions that human beings ask.

- Why do I exist?
- Where did I come from?
- Where am I going?
- Who created the universe?
- Who created me?
- Why is there something rather than nothing?
- What is the purpose of human life?
- What happens after death?
- Why do good and evil exist?
- Is there a Creator behind the universe?

The chapter emphasizes that asking such questions does not weaken faith. Instead, asking questions can help a person understand and strengthen faith.

Religion particularly deals with questions of “Who?”, whereas science mainly explains “How?”.

- Science can explain how stars form, how cells divide, how the heart pumps blood, and how a seed grows.
- Religion asks deeper questions such as: Who is behind existence? What is the ultimate purpose?

2. A Universe Beyond Imagination

The observable universe is extremely vast. Its enormous scale raises questions about its existence, order, structure, and ultimate origin.

- How can such a vast universe exist?
- Why does the universe have order and structure?
- Why are there consistent patterns?
- Is the universe simply “there,” or does its existence point toward a Creator?
- Does the enormous size of the universe make the question of a Creator less important—or more significant?

Main idea: The complexity, vastness, and order of the universe encourage human beings to think about its ultimate origin and Creator.

3. A Beginning: Why Is There Something Rather Than Nothing?

The origin of the universe raises questions beyond simply describing its expansion.

- If the universe had a beginning, where did its first reality come from?
- Why do matter and energy exist?
- Why do physical laws exist?
- Why do forces such as gravity, electromagnetism and nuclear forces operate in an orderly way?
- Who established the order before human beings existed?

The central philosophical question is: Why is there something rather than nothing?

4. The Atom — Order in the Invisible World

Even ordinary objects such as a desk, stone, human hand, and brain are made from an invisible and highly organized microscopic world.

- Why do atoms follow consistent laws?
- How do invisible particles combine in reliable ways?
- How can they produce water, cells and living bodies?
- Does explaining the mechanism completely explain why such an ordered system exists?

Science can describe how atomic systems work, while the chapter uses their order and organization to raise questions about why such a system exists.

5. A Seed That Knows How to Become a Tree

A tiny seed contains the potential to develop into roots, branches, leaves, and future seeds.

- How does a tiny seed become a complete plant?
- How does it know to grow roots downward and shoots upward?
- Why does it respond to water, light, temperature, and soil?
- How do genes and hormones coordinate the process?

The growth of a seed demonstrates an organized biological process and is used to encourage reflection on the source of order and purposeful organization in nature.

6. From a Tiny Beginning to a Thinking Human

Human development begins from a very small beginning and eventually produces a body capable of thought, memory, choice, emotion, and consciousness.

- How do specialized cells develop?
- How does one group become heart tissue, another bone, and another eyes?
- How does the brain develop?
- How does a human eventually become capable of thinking and asking: “Who created me?”

7. The Heart You Never Have to Command

The heart works continuously, even before a person understands how it works. We do not consciously command the heart to beat. It works continuously, pumps blood, and coordinates with blood vessels and electrical signals.

Medicine can explain how heartbeat is generated and how blood circulates, but the chapter asks whether understanding the mechanism removes the sense of wonder or instead deepens it.

8. The Epiglottis — A Silent Guardian

The epiglottis is a small structure that protects the airway while swallowing.

- How can people eat and drink without consciously controlling this mechanism?
- How does such a small structure coordinate swallowing?
- Why is such a protective mechanism built into the human body?

9. The Question the Qur'an Asks

The chapter presents the Qur'anic question:

> “Were they created by nothing, or are they themselves the creators?” — Qur'an 52:35

The verse encourages humans to think about whether they created themselves, whether existence came from nothing, and whether the existence of a dependent and ordered universe points toward a Creator.

The Qur'an is presented as directing people toward deeper thinking about existence and its Creator.

PART 2 — INTRODUCTION TO RELIGION

10. Meaning and Etymology of Religion

The term “religion” is explained through several linguistic meanings.

- Old French: Religion is associated with respect for what is sacred.
- Latin: Religionem is associated with reverence for the gods.
- Modern sense: Recognition of and obedience to a higher unseen power.

The words Creed, Cult, and Faith are also mentioned in connection with religion.

11. Meaning of Mazhab — ■■■■

The Urdu word Mazhab (■■■■) is originally an Arabic word. It literally conveys concepts such as a way to go, a path to walk, a style, or a method.

Exam point: Mazhab = way / path / method.

12. Meaning of Deen — ■■■

The Arabic word Deen (■■■) is used for religion and carries meanings such as relation, recompense, requital, commandment, and judgment.

The Qur'an refers to Allah as Master of the Day of Judgment.

The Qur'an commonly uses the word Deen for religion. Other words mentioned include Millah, Sirat, Minhaj, and Shir'ah. Deen is emphasized as the preferred and frequently used term in the context of divine guidance in the Qur'an and Hadith.

The chapter also distinguishes Mazhab from Deen, noting that Mazhab is commonly used in Urdu for religion or a school of thought.

13. Definitions of Religion

Edward Burnett Tylor (1832–1917)

In Primitive Culture, religion is defined as belief in spiritual beings.

David Émile Durkheim (1858–1917)

In The Elementary Forms of the Religious Life, religion is described as a unified system of beliefs and practices relative to sacred things.

William James (1842–1910)

In The Varieties of Religious Experiences, religion focuses on feelings, acts, and experiences of individuals in relation to what they consider divine.

14. Divine Perspective — Eastern Perspective

From the divine/Eastern perspective presented in the chapter: religion is a complete code of life set and sent down by the Creator, Lord God, through His messengers from time to time to guide His slaves (mankind and Jinn) toward success in life and the afterlife.

- Religion is from the Creator.
- It is delivered through messengers.
- It is intended for mankind and Jinn.
- It guides life in this world and the Hereafter.

15. Western vs Islamic Understanding

Many Western perspectives: Religion is often treated primarily as a matter of thought, personal belief, or private spiritual experience.

Islamic perspective: Religion is practical, comprehensive, socially integrated, and concerned with both individual and collective life.

Key distinction: Western emphasis = religion as personal belief/thought. Islamic emphasis = belief + practice + complete way of life.

PART 3 — NEED FOR RELIGION

16. Why Does Humanity Need Religion?

Religion is presented as an essential need because it gives meaning to life, explains the essence of existence, and establishes the core purpose of mankind.

17. Demand of Nature

The chapter connects religion with human nature. Human beings naturally desire freedom, liberation, security, protection, and meaning. They also recognize forces beyond their control and may turn toward belief in a supernatural or greater power.

18. Innate Human Nature

Human beings are presented as having an innate tendency to believe in an unseen supernatural power. This is offered as one reason spirituality and religion appear repeatedly throughout human societies.

19. The “God Gene” Hypothesis

The chapter discusses Dean H. Hamer and his book The God Gene: How Faith Is Hardwired into Our Genes.

Hamer proposed the hypothesis that certain aspects of human spirituality might have a biological or genetic basis. The gene VMAT2 is mentioned in connection with neurotransmitter transport, mystical experiences, spiritual beliefs, and self-transcendence.

Exam clarification: The chapter presents this as a hypothesis, not simply as an established fact.

20. Andrew Newberg

The chapter also mentions neuroscientist Dr. Andrew Newberg. His research examines relationships between brain activity, prayer, meditation, and mystical/religious experiences.

His book mentioned is How God Changes Your Brain (2009). The chapter connects this research with the idea that spirituality may have a neurobiological basis.

21. Craving for Knowledge of Essential Facts

Human beings naturally want to understand themselves, the universe, their origin, their destination, and their purpose.

- “From where?” — Where did I come from?
- “To where?” — Where am I going?
- “Why?” — Why do I exist?

22. Questions About Human Existence

- Did I come into existence by myself?
- Is there a Creator?
- Who created the universe?
- Why does life exist?
- Why do humans have intelligence?
- Why do humans have consciousness?
- Why are humans different from animals?
- What happens after death?
- Is death the end?
- Is there another life after death?
- Why do good people suffer?
- Why are evil people sometimes successful?
- Is there a purpose behind existence?

The Islamic answer presented in the chapter is that human beings were not created by chance. They were created by a Creator who gave them form, hearing, sight, intelligence, hearts, and blessings. Thus, existence has a purpose.

PART 4 — CLASSIFICATION OF RELIGIONS

23. Revealed and Non-Revealed Religions

The chapter states that there are almost one thousand religions, including tribal religions. They are broadly classified into two categories.

- Revealed Religions: Religions that claim divine revelation/scripture. The chapter identifies Judaism, Christianity, and Islam as revealed religions.
- Non-Revealed Religions: Religions that do not claim divine scripture in the same manner, although some possess sacred or holy books.

Exam point: Two broad categories = Revealed + Non-Revealed.

PART 5 — THEOLOGICAL IDEAS

The chapter discusses six major viewpoints concerning God, the universe, and the relationship between God and the universe.

24. Atheism

Atheism denies the existence of God or divine beings. It may regard the universe as self-existent or independent of supernatural beings.

- Strong atheism = explicit rejection of belief in God.
- Weak atheism = absence of belief in God.

Contemporary atheists often emphasize naturalistic explanations, empirical evidence, and rejection of metaphysical explanations.

25. Agnosticism

Agnosticism is a position of uncertainty or non-commitment regarding God's existence or non-existence. An agnostic may believe that the question is unknown, currently unknowable, or impossible to establish with certainty. The term is associated in the chapter with Thomas Huxley.

26. Deism

Deism believes in a Creator who initiated the universe but generally rejects divine revelation and ongoing supernatural intervention in worldly affairs. Deists emphasize reason and observation of nature. The chapter associates this view with Enlightenment thinkers such as Voltaire and Thomas Jefferson.

27. Pantheism

Pantheism identifies or closely equates God and the universe/nature. Divinity is viewed as present in nature, rather than as a separate personal transcendent being. Baruch Spinoza is mentioned in connection with this worldview.

28. Monotheism

Monotheism means belief in one God. God is understood as single, all-powerful, and transcendent. The chapter identifies monotheism as the theological foundation of Judaism, Christianity, and Islam.

29. Polytheism

Polytheism means belief in multiple gods/deities. These may be associated with nature, human life, or cosmic functions. Examples mentioned include ancient Greece, Rome, and Egypt.

PART 6 — INTRODUCTION TO ISLAM

30. Meaning of Islam

Islam is described as a major world religion and the religion of truth. It includes beliefs, thoughts, and practices. The Qur'an describes Islam as the true religion and the final and complete version of divine guidance.

31. Etymology of Islam

The word Islam (■■■■■) comes from the Arabic root associated with Salama (■■■), conveying peace and safety. Islam also conveys obedience, submission, and surrender.

Easy to remember: Islam = submission and obedience to Allah → leading to peace/safety.

32. Definition and Concept of Islam

Islam is presented as a complete code of life revealed by Allah—the Creator, Owner, Sustainer and Lord—to His Prophets and Messengers from Adam (AS) to Muhammad (■), to guide mankind and Jinn toward success in life and the Hereafter.

- It comes from Allah.
- It was delivered through prophets and messengers.

- It extends from Adam (AS) to Muhammad (■).
- It provides guidance.
- It applies to mankind and Jinn.
- It concerns both this world and the Hereafter.

33. Islam Is a Complete Code of Life

Islam is not limited to rituals. It provides guidance for worship, eating, drinking, sleeping, dressing, family life, social relationships, economics, politics, law, and morality.

Important distinction: Islam is presented as a complete way of life, not simply a collection of religious ceremonies.

34. Islam Is a Divine Religion

Islam is described as chosen by Allah, revealed by Allah, and not man-made. Its teachings are described as being sent through the chain of prophets and messengers. The final revelation was delivered to Prophet Muhammad (■) through Angel Jibreel (AS).

PART 7 — SUBJECT OF ISLAM

35. Subject of Islam

Every discipline has a subject. For example, the human body is the subject of medical science and machines are studied by engineering. Similarly, the subject of Islamic teachings is connected with human beings and Jinn as servants/slaves of Allah. The purpose is to teach them how to live according to Allah's guidance.

PART 8 — OBJECTIVE OF ISLAM

36. Main Objective

The objective of Islam is to provide complete guidance to mankind and Jinn that leads them to success in this life and the Hereafter.

37. True Success According to Islam

Worldly success alone is not the ultimate success. True success is described as being safely removed from Hell and admitted into Paradise. The chapter cites Qur'an 3:185 for this idea.

Therefore, worldly wealth, fame, or achievement is temporary; ultimate success is success in the Hereafter.

PART 9 — THREE LEVELS: ISLAM, IMAN, IHSAN

38. Islam — Five Pillars

The Hadith of Jibreel explains the five pillars of Islam:

- 1. Shahadah — declaration of faith in the Oneness of Allah and the prophethood of Muhammad ■.
- 2. Salah — performing the five daily prayers.
- 3. Zakat — giving obligatory charity to eligible poor and needy people.
- 4. Sawm — fasting during the month of Ramadan.
- 5. Hajj — pilgrimage to Makkah for those who are able.

39. Iman — Six Articles of Faith

- 1. Belief in Allah.

- 2. Belief in His Angels.
- 3. Belief in His Books.
- 4. Belief in His Messengers.
- 5. Belief in the Day of Judgment.
- 6. Belief in Divine Decree / Predestination — good and bad are decreed by Allah.

40. Ihsan — Excellence in Worship

Ihsan means excellence in worship and conduct. The Prophet ■ explained it as worshipping Allah as though you see Him, and if you cannot see Him, knowing that He sees you.

Simple meaning: even when nobody else is watching you, Allah is watching you. Therefore worship should involve sincerity, awareness, excellence, and consciousness of Allah.

The chapter emphasizes that Islam, Iman, and Ihsan represent only a portion of the complete Islamic teachings; Islam is broader than these three concepts alone.

PART 10 — STRUCTURE OF ISLAM

41. Foundations

- Tawheed — Oneness of Allah.
- Risalah — Prophethood/Messengership.
- Akhirah — Hereafter.

42. Religious Structure

A. Beliefs — Iman

- Oneness of Allah
- Prophets
- Angels
- Holy Books
- Day of Judgment
- Destiny/Qadar

B. Practices — Ibadah

- Shahadah
- Salah
- Sawm
- Zakat
- Hajj

C. Sources of Islamic Law/Jurisprudence

- Qur'an — primary revealed source.
- Sunnah — way and teachings of Prophet Muhammad ■.
- Ijma — consensus.
- Qiyas — analogy.

43. Islamic Systems

Social System: respect for soul/human dignity, family structure, marriage and divorce laws, gender roles, rights of neighbors, and rights of orphans.

Ethical System: Halal vs Haram, personal integrity, justice ('Adl), social values, avoidance of unethical acts, and accountability before God.

Political System: Shura (consultation), Caliphate/Imamate concepts, governance under Shariah, justice, and law enforcement.

Economic System: Zakat (wealth purification), prohibition of Riba (interest), Islamic banking and finance, fair trade, and charity.

PART 11 — WHY ISLAM?

44. Reasons Discussed in the Chapter

The chapter discusses experiences of converts who found Islam compelling, transformative, and meaningful.

- Clear Monotheism: Islam's emphasis on the Oneness of Allah provides a clear concept of God.
- Personal Responsibility: Individuals are responsible for their choices and actions.
- Global Community: Islam provides a sense of belonging to a worldwide community.
- Preservation of the Qur'an: The Qur'an is presented as timeless, preserved, and unaltered.
- Simplicity and Coherence: The message of Islam is presented as simple, coherent, and spiritually meaningful.
- Inner Peace: Structured living and moral guidance are described as sources of inner peace.
- Justice: Islam's emphasis on justice is presented as another reason people find it meaningful.

The chapter encourages studying the experiences of converts to understand reasons that led them toward Islam.

PART 12 — FINALITY OF ISLAM

45. Finality of Islam

The chapter states that Islam is the final version of divine guidance revealed to Prophet Muhammad ■.

It cites the Qur'anic statement: “Truly, the religion with Allah is Islam.”

The chapter emphasizes that Muslims should maintain faith in and follow Islam. Another Qur'anic verse states that believers should not die except in a state of being Muslims.

Islam is therefore presented as the final version of divine guidance, Prophet Muhammad ■ as the final messenger, and following Islam as necessary for ultimate success in the Hereafter.

The chapter cites Qur'an 3:19, 3:102, 3:85 and 3:91, along with a hadith from Sahih Muslim, in this section.

PART 13 — BELIEF SYSTEM OF ISLAM

46. Meaning of Iman

Iman (■■■■■) is the Arabic word for belief. It comes from the root A-M-N (■ ■ ■), conveying security, affirmation, and trust. Linguistically, Iman means to affirm something as true and to feel secure in it.

47. Technical Definition of Iman

In Islamic terminology, Iman means firm conviction and acceptance of the truth revealed by Allah through Prophet Muhammad ■.

Iman = Heart + Tongue + Actions

Thus belief is not merely an intellectual idea; it should appear in practice, character, and commitment.

48. Importance of Belief

Belief is the foundation of Muslim identity, the first requirement for entering Islam, and the foundation of righteous actions. According to the chapter, righteous actions without correct belief are not accepted by Allah. The Qur'an is cited regarding believers who perform righteous deeds receiving Paradise.

49. Six Articles of Faith

- Iman bil-Tawhid — Belief in Oneness of Allah.
- Iman bil-Mala'ikah — Belief in Angels.
- Iman bil-Kutub — Belief in Divine Books.
- Iman bir-Rusul — Belief in Prophets/Messengers.
- Iman bil-Yawm al-Akhirah — Belief in Last Day.
- Iman bil-Qadar — Belief in Divine Decree.

PART 14 — IMAN BIL-TAWHID

50. Meaning of Tawhid

Tawhid means attributing absolute Oneness to Allah. Allah is One, Unique, without partner, without equal, and without peer.

Tawhid is described as the foundation of Islam and a central aspect of Islamic creed.

51. Importance of Tawhid

Tawhid is one of the most significant beliefs in Islam. A person needs to understand Allah's existence, Oneness, unique attributes, and the dependence of creation upon Allah.

Tawhid forms the basis for developing a relationship with Allah. Believers are encouraged to strengthen their belief through Qur'an, Hadith, knowledge, and reflection.

52. Tawhid in the Qur'an

The chapter states that Tawhid is the main theme and central teaching of the Qur'an. The message of the prophets is repeatedly described as calling people toward worshipping Allah alone. Examples cited include Qur'an 5:8, 21:25, and 16:36.

PART 15 — THREE TYPES OF TAWHID

53. Tawhid ar-Rububiyyah — Oneness of Lordship

Rububiyyah comes from the Arabic root associated with Rabb, meaning Lord. It means believing that Allah alone is the Creator, Sustainer, and Lord of the universe.

- Allah created everything.
- Allah caused creation to exist.
- Allah sustains creation.
- Allah maintains the universe.
- Allah is the sole Lord.
- Allah is independent of creation.

The chapter discusses creation ex nihilo, meaning creation out of nothing. Matter is presented as not being eternal but created through divine creative action.

Dependence: Everything depends upon Allah; Allah does not depend upon anything.

Remember: Creation = dependent. Allah = independent.

The chapter connects this concept with Surah Al-Fatihah and Surah Al-Naml.

54. Tawhid al-Uluhiyyah — Oneness of Worship

Uluhiyyah refers to the Oneness of Allah in worship. It means only Allah is the true God worthy of worship.

Ibadah includes obedience, submission, servitude, and complete love accompanied by complete submission.

Worship is comprehensive and includes more than formal prayers. It can include supplication (Dua), reliance, obedience, submission, and other acts pleasing to Allah.

All worship must be directed solely to Allah.

55. Kalimah as an Example of Uluhiyyah

La ilaha illallah is used as an example of Tawhid al-Uluhiyyah.

Its essential meaning is: There is no being worthy of worship except Allah.

- No other being deserves worship.
- Allah alone deserves submission.
- Allah alone deserves ultimate devotion.

Acts such as prayer, charity, dua, tawaf, and sajdah are acts of worship. Directing such worship to another besides Allah is identified in the chapter as Shirk.

56. Tawhid al-Asma wa-Sifat — Oneness of Names and Attributes

This type of Tawhid concerns maintaining the Oneness and uniqueness of Allah's names and attributes.

- Allah's names and attributes are unique to Him.
- Allah should be referred to according to how Allah described Himself and how Prophet Muhammad ■ described Him.
- Allah should be described as He described Himself; humans should not invent new divine names or attributes.
- Allah's attributes must not be compared with the attributes of His creation.

Human qualities may exist in a limited sense, but they do not mean that the attribute is identical to Allah's attribute. Human abilities are limited, created attributes have limitations, Allah's attributes are incomparable, and Allah is independent.

57. Difference Between Creator and Creation

Creation: limited, dependent, has a beginning, has an end, and possesses restricted abilities.

Allah: independent, incomparable, not dependent on creation, and possesses attributes that are not limited like those of creation.

Therefore, human qualities should never be equated with Allah's attributes at the same level.

58. Al-Hayy and Al-Qayyum

- Al-Hayy — The Ever-Living.
- Al-Qayyum — The Self-Subsisting / Sustainer.

These names emphasize that Allah possesses true life, does not depend upon creation, creation depends upon Allah, and Allah sustains everything.
